

Reflection on Psalm 148

When we praise God,
we become part of something
greater,
higher,
deeper,
richer.

We join our heart and voice
with all reality
to praise and thank the One who gave us
existence,
life,
purpose, and
nobility.

All that is highest in all creation
praises Him –
angels,
sun,
moon and
stars, and
worlds beyond worlds.

All that is earthly praises Him,
all creatures
great and small,
water, wind, and fire,
mountains and hills,
plains and valleys,
trees and all plant life, and a universe of microscopic wonders.

What is more,
with all these we stand on tip-toe,
eagerly awaiting the full revelation of Jesus Christ.

For when He is revealed for all He is,
we and all creation
will be freed from the corruption brought on us by
sin and death,

freed forever into all the glory and purity of Jesus Christ (Romans 8:18-23).

With all creation,
all reality,
lift your heart and voice to praise the God who gives us being.
And with them cry out in prayer together:
“COME, LORD JESUS!”
